Urban Cultures in (post)colonial Central Europe Apr 24 2022 "Agata Anna Lisiak shows in her book Urban Cultures in (Post)colonial Central Europe how the postcolonial idea, developed recently to study Central and East European culture, can help us see the transformations of cities in the region. Lisiak argues that Berlin, Budapest Warsaw, and Prague are incubated cultures whose deepest forces were shadowy and ironic."-Marshall Berman, City University of New York "Lisiak's rendition of Siegfried J. Schmidt's and Itamar Even-Zohar's theoretical frameworks-the empirical study of culture, literature, and the media and polysystem theory-are combined with concepts of comparative cultural studies, and the concept of the "(post)colonial city" is applied and implemented throughout her argumentation. Lisiak sees the diminishing centrality of the old communist "colonizers" as coexisting with the impact of Western and globalized cultural patterns. The theoretical background of the study, combined with Steven T÷t÷sy de Zepetnek's concept of Central European culture and its "in-between peripherality," offers a tool to analyze cultural representations of Central Europe in past decades. The book includes detailed observations on the history of street names, analyses of web sites, and literary, cinematic, and architectural representations in Berlin, Budapest, Prague, and Warsaw."-Bart Keunen, Ghent University
